

Steps to Write an Amazing Argumentative Essay in no Time

Well, writing an essay in no time is not just as easy as it is said. An essay writer has to be very proficient and experienced to make it in time. Especially, when it comes to writing an argumentative essay, it usually takes a lot of time researching and building arguments. An argumentative essay is an evidential response to a prompt that can create a dilemma. An argumentative essay must have a debatable topic that has two sides to it. These sides must be contrasting in such a way that a composite essay can be written.

There are a few steps that every argumentative essay writer should follow. I always follow them when I write my essay, and doing so makes me formulate arguments in no time. The following steps are stated in an order, so you must follow them accordingly.

1. One should have a strong focus on the work, they should clear their mind from any extraneous thoughts. It is better to remove any distractions from your surroundings and start thinking about the assigned topic.
2. The next step is to turn off your mobile phone and any other social media applications. As these days all of us are involved in some sort of social activity, it is the biggest interruption and distraction that should be turned off.

3. Once you are done with these two prerequisites, open your laptop and start with reading a few articles on the assigned topic. After reading these articles, you will be able to select a side that you think is right.
4. Now that you are done with selecting either that you are writing for or against the topic, then you should start finding evidence on google scholar. An essay writer should at least find 10-15 sources to back up your idea. Now after having these sources, scrutinize the best 7 of them.
5. Now you are ready to write, sort those 7 pieces of evidence in your notes and make their topic sentences in the first draft. After making the topic sentences, you should add a premise/ basis of that topic sentence. Do the same for all the 7 body paragraphs for which you have collected the evidence. Make sure that these 7 paragraphs have a section that contains a claim of the other side as well. The claim of the opposite side must be counter tackled with a piece of evidence to support your thesis.
6. After you are done introducing your 7 paragraphs, start incorporating the evidence. You must not quote the evidence directly; instead, you should use the paraphrasing technique. Paraphrase all the sources and add them. Right then and there, cite them in the format that you are asked for. You can cite them using a software like Zotero or an online compiler citethisforme. If any of you are unaware of the formats, then for your understanding they are the way to organize your document. There are many formats such as APA, MLA, Chicago, and Harvard. All of them have different ways to organize the document. So if you want to know their details, then search on the internet and get your document formatted.
7. After this, simply explain the evidence of all the paragraphs in one to two lines. Now you are done with 2/3rd of your essay.
8. All you have to do now is compose a thesis statement and get your introduction and conclusion done.
9. For a thesis statement, you should be concise, and it must have all the topic sentences/claims in it. You should state the topic first, which is followed by claims, and then add a rationale to it that answers the why of doing this research essay. A write my essay service can take care of all your writing needs.
10. Now that you are done making a thesis statement, then write an introduction. In the introduction, you should start with a definition of the topic, then a brief background of the topic, after stating the thesis statement, you are done with the introduction.
11. In conclusion, restate the refined thesis statement, then summarize your claims and counterclaim. After this, conclude your essay in some logical way and wrap your essay nicely.

If you follow these steps, then you can surely write an impressive argumentative essay earlier than others.

The above-stated tips are from an expert point of view, and they guide the new writers about each and every detail.
